Chaim Kramer discusses the weekly Torah portion, Parshat Korach. Although Korach was very wealthy, he was jealous of Moshe's status as the leader of the Jewish nation, and this jealousy led to rebellion. Korach's desire for honor led to destruction. This arrogant lust for honor and power still burns in the hearts of many people today. But honor and power if used incorrectly not only destroy others, but also one's self. Rebbe Nachman teaches us not to give in to the desire for honor and be swallowed up by our own materialism.
