Daf HaYomi—A Breslov Idea?

Ninety five years ago, the great Rav Meir Shapiro of Lublin created Daf HaYomi, (Page of the Day), the Talmud learning program which revolutionized the Jewish world. Since then, every seven and a half years, hundreds of thousands of Torah students and others from around the world completed study of the entire Talmud—a monumental achievement.

Interestingly, it has been suggested that the great Rav Meir Shapiro might have taken his inspiration from his Breslov students who, following Rebbe Nachman's advice (Wisdom #76), would constantly plow their way through the great Torah classics until they completed them, and would then begin all over again.

Thirteen years ago in Israel, Hebrew speaking Breslov students began their own daily cycle, Chok Breslov—the Day by Day Breslov study program. This phenomenal program has helped tens of thousands of students complete every major Breslov work—ten in all—in just one year. We know learning Breslov changes lives—can you imagine the changes learning ten major Breslov texts in one year can bring?

Now, the Breslov Research Institute is making this program available to you and other English-speaking Breslov students in a thirteen-volume, paperback book series. The first four monthly volumes of Day by Day are ready for print and the rest are being prepared as you read this letter.

And there's more exciting news: Day by Day will be the basis for the first-ever Breslov App.
